following note:

To the Editor of The Tribune.

Sir: In this morning's issue of your paper, under the head of "Grand Army Bugle Notes," a statement is made reflecting on the election of General Gibbon for the presidency of the Army of the Potomac. As mentioned in the statement, the lith Corps supported and voted for General Pratt, and as my name has been used in connection with the statement, I deem it my duty to emphatically deny that any doubt as to the fairness of General Gibbon's election was ever expressed by members of the 11th Corps. In fact, I have never heard the election questioned by any one until it appeared in print this morning. JOHN T. LOCKMAN. No. 88 Nassau-st., New-York City, July 1, 1895.

Colonel A. M. Clark, the secretary of the Society of the Fifth Army Corps, which was General Fitz ohn Porter's old command, repels the insinuation that General Gibbon's election was due to many manoeuvring." Nominations, Colonel Clark writes, were made by corps. The 1st, 2d, 3d and 4th corps nominated General Gibbon; the 5th nominated General F. A. Walker, the 6th and 18th named General W. W. Henry, the 9th, 10th, 11th and 19th corps nominated General Calvin E. Pratt; General D. McM. Gregg was named by the Cavalry corps, b. McM. Gregg was named by the Cavairy corps, while the 12th and Signal corps and the general staff made no nomination. Before the voting began General Henry withdrew in favor of General Gibbon; the 5th corps went to General Gibbon. Four tellers were appointed, and when the voting was over they counted the ballots. Out of 165 votes cast they found that General Gibbon had 121; General Pratt, 21; General Gregg, 20 and General Walker, 3. Colonel Clark, who was himself one of the tellers, adds:

The 2d, 3d, 5th and 6th corps were more largely represented at the meeting than were the other corps, excepting the cavalry, and the vote as cast-excepting that for General Walker-very nearly corresponds with the number present of the corps which respectively nominated the candidates. If there was any "Tammany" in this the tellers falled to detect it, and they are content in the belief that the result of the election, as reported by them, was in full accord with the preference of a large majority of the society. The fact that General Gibbon's address was "prepared beforehand" Colonel Clark regards as no evi tion." Old soldiers are rarely extempore speakers, and the Colonel remembers but one off-hand oration this kind-that of General Horace Porter in Brooklyn in 1884. Some of the things which General Gibbon said regarding the case of General Porter in the address which has been criticised were the following:

The rule which should govern, and the only one, ought to be "Say only the truth of the dead—or the living." Had this been the rule a generation ago, this great country of ours would have escaped a foul blot upon her record, a blot which cost one of her most loyal, brave and devoted defenders many long years of agony and shame. Now fancy, if you are able, the tremendous load which is lifted from the shoulders of such an innocent man, by the ablest military minds of the country, proclaiming that after the most searching investigation it is demonstrated beyond question that the charges against him were false. None of us can fully appreciate this, but the wildest range of the imagination cannot exagerate it. Can any one who has suffered such undeserved tortures be indemnified in any way? Ask yourselves the question and answer it. We all know well what the answer from the vast majority must be. And yet there are now and then doubting Thomases to be met with who would not be convinced though one rose from the dead. These, even to this day, will sometimes ask "But are you sure your view of the case is correct? Are the facts in connection with it so clearly established?" Such doubters need a fall from the top of the monument where Warren fell to open their skulls to the fact of the existence of the force of gravity. ess which has been criticised were the following:

ravity.

It is said to have been claimed by some during the war that the Constitution of the country with a beyance—dead, suspended, or petrified, whith he war was going on. Certainly there was an a sorought the American people to a belief so foreign to the truth and the facts in this notorious cas as it takes long years to change such a state of a lairs back to its natural grooves, so it takes tin or overcome opinions formed under such circumstances. But in a country like ours, blessed with the latter that the country like ours, blessed with the country like the country like the country like ours, blessed with the country like ours blessed with the coun tances. But in a country like ours, blessed with ree institutions and an untranmelled press, after a revolution in sentiment commences, it progresses with Herculean strides. After all the long years of rial through which he has gone, there remain ome great consolations to Fitz John Porter. He has utilived his calumnles and has demonstrated to the atisfaction of his countrymen and to their representatives in Congress, his entire innocence of the harges against him, and has done what few other een have ever done under like circumstances, placed is case so clearly on record that history can make omistake in regard to it.

Some of the reports show that the old Army training has not been foreotten, while others-well, the least said about them the better. If the loss in membership in those received thus far is continued in the reports that are to come, there will be a sad falling off in numbers in this department. Department Commander E. J. When the survivors of the Third Army Corps gathered at Hadley, Mass., last May, a part of the plan connected with the reunion was to have the vet-erans of the corps contribute $1 each for the portrait of Major-General Joseph Hooker, to be pre-sented to the town of Hadley. The scheme was only partially successful, as the "old boys" are so scattered that many failed to hear of it, although ber of the Third Corps live in the States of New-York and Pennsylvania, and there are still a few hundred dollars to be raised. The formation of organizations in several cities of the department to attend the next National Encampment in a body, either as a battalion or company, meets the hearty approval of the Department Commander. He thinks that the commendable feature of such plans must be apparent to all. the National Encampment of 1885, are making great efforts to render the visit of every veteran one of interest and pleasure. It is therefore desirable that every comrade of this department who can conveniently attend will avail himself of the opportunity. Rates of faire on trunk lines of railways and other information will be published soon.

John A. Dix Post, No. 185, has passed a resolution deciling to attend the Louisville Encampment in a body, and every comrade who can do so will go along. Arrangements have been made at reduced rates with the railroad company for sleeping-cars which will be utilized by the veterans during their sojourn in Kentucky. General N. W. Day, one of the most earnest workers of the post, says that the turnout will be a splendid one.

General Alexander J. Mackay, of General George H. Thomas's staff during the war, has been spending several days in the metropolis, in company with his old comrade, Major George B. Hibbard. General Mackay at the outbreak of the war was a resident of Texas, but at the call of General Thomas hastened North, and fell into the Union line. He was one of the confidential friends of the "Old Rock of Chickamauga," and was with him throughout his entire war career and up to the time of his death.

At the recent reunion of the Eleventh Army Corps during the meeting of the Potomac Society, these officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, General T. H. Osborn; vice-president, First Division, Captain William Wilson, jr.; vice-president, Third Division, Captain Charles A. Paddock; historian, Colonel August C. Hamlin; secretary, Captain Francis Irsch; delegate, General John T. Lockman.

Benjamin Ringgold Post, No. 23, of Long Island City, presented a beautiful silk flag to Grammar School No. 7 of that city last week. The post marched in a body to the school, where it was received with all the honors by the School Committee, teachers and pupils. The presentation speech was made by Commander H. H. Adams, of Lafayotte Post, No. 149, New-York, and was one of his happiest efforts.

Comrades of the field and staff who desire to be mounted on the day of the great parade, September II, at the National Encampment in Louisville, should lose no time in addressing Henry S. Cohn, chairman of the Parade and Review Committee, No. 341 West Green-st., Louisville. The prices will be 44 for a horse without equipments and 37 for a horse with equipments. On payment of 57 the equipments, which will consist of a McCleilan saddle, saddle cloth, martingale and first-class outfit throughout, become the property of the officer.

Commades of Horace Greeley Post, No. 577, were guests last Thursday of the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Clendennin at Westchester Village. The comrades were very hospitably received by the doctor and his charming wife and royally entertained. Mrs. Clendennin, who is a daughter of the late Horace Greeley, had a hearty welcome and a pleasant smile for each grizzled veteran.

The comrades of Noah L. Farnham Post, No. 458, will hold their annual summer-night's festival at Lion Park on Tuesday evening. July 30. Many of the volunteer firemen of the city have signified their intention of being present, and the interest already manifested indicates a grand time.

The thirteenth annual reunion of the survivors of the 14th Regiment, N. Y. Artillery, will be held at Binghamton, N. Y., on Wednesday and Thursday, August 14 and 15. ## IS DR. O'CONNELL TO BE MADE A BISHOP!

SURPRISE AT HIS RESIGNATION AS RECTOR OF THE AMERICAN COLLEGE IN ROME.

Much comment has been caused in ecclesiastical circles in this city by the reported resignation of the Rev. Monsignor Denis O'Connell from the rectorship of the American College, in Rome, of which office he has for many years been the infairs in Rome are loath to believe that his retire correspondence to that effect has been confirmed by private advices received here within a few days. Little doubt, therefore, remains of the truth of the report among those best informed.

in the Church, one of his uncles having been the head of the Order of St. Benedict in the South. Since his assumption of his important office Monsignor O'Connell has been one of the best known among the clergy in Rome, and has stood high in the esteem of the Pope.

The standing of Monsignor O'Connell with the Holy See is so well understood that his resignation indicates, in the minds of many, that still greater honors are in store for him. His resignation, coming so quickly after the visit of Cardinal Gibbons to Rome, is believed to be especially significant, and it is generally conceded that whatever honor is to be bestowed upon him will probably be in the form of episcopal advancement in this country, it is not thought that he will become the head of a see in the United States, but that he will be made the coadjutor to an archbishop and in the line of succession. It is possible, it is said by some, that Cardinal Gibbons has asked that he be appointed as a coadjutor to himself in the archbishopric of Baltimore, while others predict that he will be appointed coadjutor to the Most Rev. Archbishop of New-York.

It will be divided, the swell organ being over the sacristy on the east side of the chancel and the remainder of the instrument on the west side. There are to be thirty-nine speaking stops, all running through with the exception of the vox celeste, which will end at tenor C. There will be three manuals of sixty-one notes each, and a pedal organ of thirty notes. There are to be eleven stops in the great organ, thirteen in the swell, eight in the choir and seven in the pedal, with a total of 2.371 pipes. In addition there are thirty-two couplers, combination pistons and pedal movements, giving the organist the most perfect control of the mechanism of the instrument. The action is to be full tubular throughout, with all the latest improvements. The great organ and the choir organ are to be in swell boxes, with the exception of the two open diapasons, which will be utilized for the display pipes. A feature of the organ in which it will differ from others is in the combination pistons, which are to be entirely independent of the draw-stop action. This will make it possible for the organist to arrange combinations on the draw stops, throw on other combinations by the pistons, and return instantly to the original combinations by the release of the piston movement. The organ will be blown by water motor. It is expected that it will be built and ready for use by Christmas. The estimated cost is $11,000.

Hotel, there was more of Sunday quiet there than elsewhere. Many of the Oriental's boarders are from inland cities, and to simply look out upon break upon the beach is a restful sufficiency. The hotel veranda was filled all day with people in this mood. The amusements yesterday were limited to Sousa's and Seldl's concerts, the one at Manhattan and the other at Brighton. The afternoon and even ing performances were largely attended.

Down at the West End all was life and variety. No one went there for a quiet Sunday. The side-walks were so thronged that getting about was sometimes difficult. The boats and trains from New-York began disembarking people at i o'clock and kept it up till 6. All the "places" were in "full swing," and when the reporter asked Captain Clayton, of the Coney Island precinct, whether much beer was being drunk, the wooden elephant was seen to wink his left eye. The burned district is covered with tented "attractions," and the man with a dollar can kill time at the West End without incurring a risk of penal servitude. The merry-gorounds were extensively patronized, and so was the Ferris wheel. A "Parisian Theatre" with a "Turkish harem" attachment had its alieged merits shouted forth by two unshaved men, who told those who hesitated at the threshold: "Walk right in gents; youse can't go wrong in dis show." This and the cat-and-dog house, where pussy's fall meant a bad cigar to the skilled ball thrower, and the shooting gallery, where tigers and lions perpetually chased each other over rocks; shooting chutes, and roller coasters, striking machines and goat shows—all drew crowds supplied bountifully with curiosity and adequately with money.

When Mr. Doane was asked last week about the rumors concerning the meeting here of the directors, he admitted that a meeting might be held, and also that there was a possibility that it might be decided to declare a dividend.

A TEACHER STRIKES A PARK POLICEMAN. Adolph Bernann, a teacher of languages, of No. 236 Fifth-ave., took an early morning walk yesterday in Central Park. He was walking along the bridle-path in the upper end of the Park, when Park Policeman Rose, told him he was not allowed on the path. Bernann told Rose to mind his own business and to go somewhere else. Hose remonstrated with him, and the teacher struck the po-liceman in the face. Rose clubbed Bernann into submission, and then took him to the Arsenal. He was arraigned before Magistrate Crane, at Harlem Court, later. Bernann apolosized, and Magistrate Crane discharged him.

REPORTED INDULGENCE TO THE POOR

FATHER DUCEY SAYS THE POPE HAS ABOLISHED MANY DAYS OF ABSTINENCE IN FAVOR OF WORKING PEOPLE-THE RUMOR DE-NIED BY FATHER LAVELLE.

been reported that the Pope has issued decree abolishing all days of abstinence in the their families. The rumor could not be confirmed the Catholic priests of the city. Archbishop Corrigan was in Plattsburg yesterday, where he officlated at the opening of the Catholic summer school. No one at the Archbishop's house would discuss the matter in his absence. Father Lavelle said that the report was not true. At St. Francis Xavier's, in West Sixteenth-st., none of the priesis had heard of such a decree, but thought it likely they would know of it there if any such had been issued.

The Rev. Father Ducey, of St. Leo's, on the other hand, said the report was true. He added that many ecclesiastics had felt for years that the burden of denial upon the working poor was more than a hardship. They were obliged to observe the strict abstinence of the Lenten season and, going from unhealthy homes to work, often in poisoned atmospheres, were obliged to subsist on old fish or doubtful eggs. Father Ducey said that he had not seen the official document, but the information came to him through a correspondent at Rome. He had thought for years that legislation in favor of the hard-working poor was most necessary. Father Ducey said that the decree had already been promulgated in the western part of the United States, and he presumed the Archbishop, before long, would give the information to the poor of the Archdiocese of New-York. No one at the Archbishop's house would discus

A HOT, UNCOMFORTABLE SUNDAY.

The sudden change of temperature and the great humidity made yesterday a most uncomfortable day for those in the city. All who could crowded on the steamboats and trains to get a breath of air and enjoy a holiday at the seaside and other resorts. The parks were filled from early morning, and the listless child that had gasped for breath men, women and children hurrying to the different boats, and when evening came on these same people came back tired but happy. The bay was alive with shipping. Big ocean steamships, the puffing fug. sailing craft and yachts of every kind and condition excited interest all day long. The weather prospects for to-day are: Fair, fol-lowed by showers Monday night; slightly warmer; southerly winds.

About fifteen hundred people visited the Auditorium at Prohibition Park, Staten Island, yesterday to see and hear the services and meetings taken possession of the University Temple and park for a week, and will hold daily meetings. The attendance in the morning was small, few outside of members of the army being present. The great-est crowd attended during the afternoon. Three bundred officers and privates of the army were present. The meetings were conducted by Brigadier Evans and staff. The headquarters brass band was present. The services consisted of singing salvation hymns and reciting experiences by members of the army. The same programme was followed in the evening.
